SOME AFRICAN EXPLORERS

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Mombassa, British East Africa, he will they discovered Lake Tankanyika.

It is said that one of the essential things to a successful hunting trip to the irterior of Africa is an abundant supply of glass beads and cheap alarm clocks. Diamonds have no such value to the inpher Columbus and Capt. John Smith in trading with the aborigines. It is re-lated by Columbus in his diary that he felt many pangs of conscience for trading worthless trinkets for valuable gold. but Capt. John Smith has not bequeathed to posterity a single word of regret at being able to drive so good a bargain

One of the worst things Mr. Roosevelt will have to contend with on his expedition is the white ants. These insects travel in vast hordes, overrunning everything that comes their way. They can eat anything but stone and metal, and event a suit of clothes left in their path at night will be no more than a tangled ch of threads next morning. Then there are the poisonous insects with which he will have to contend. Not long ago a party of hunters happened to be in the very section to which Mr. Roosevelt is going. One happened to notice something like a mosquito on his hand. Am-monia was put on it, but the arm began swell, resisting every sort of treatment. Finally it was decided to amputate the arm. This was done, and the stump seared with fire. Even this heroic treatment did not avail, and the victim finally died in unutterable agony.

Up to three generations ago the inteof Africa was as unknown as the region of the South Pole is to-day. No matter that for centuries upon centuries before the coast regions of Africa had been the seat of a civilization which accomplished great things. No matter if the Valley of the Nile is even to-day teeming with the magnificent rulns of temples, tombs, and towers surpassing anything the modern hand has yet reared. No matter if the ancient Egyptian knew a secret of embalming that has preserved his body intact to the present day-just beyond these things the dark interior of Africa remained undisturbed.

How comes it that America and Australia, both so recently discovered, fairly teem with cities? That the iron horses speed from end to end of both continents? That the herds of buffalo are almost exterminated? That thousands of dollars are spent on the education of the Indian? And yet Africa, known from reotest ages, can boast only a few miles of railroad. Elephants and lions roam over her "uninhabitable downs," while the sons of Ham, unpunished, ly devour the white man who runs across

The ancients did make some excursions into Central Africa. Herodotus told some tales that were long regarded with suspicion, although they probably contained grains of truth. The well-known

Hence it became the Mecca of all explorers. Many died on the journey. Rene Caillie, a Frenchman, was the first to enter and return. Thus, in 1828, a great human desire had been accomplished. Timbuctoo, the great, the mysterious, had been reached. But Ichabod was written on its gate-posts—its glory had departed.

Gone the ivory palace, the University of Many died on the journey. Most of this intervening country can be covered by rail, but the last stage will be by caravan. When he gets to the end the real real scene of the Nile. Burton ridiculed the idea, and a coolness resulted. On account of his railroad journey he will find native of Burton's illness, Speke arrived in Eng-porters ready to accompany him. The land first, So great was his enthusiasm custom is to take about thirty of these that he experienced little difficulty in raisfor every white man in the party, and ing funds to go back. When Burton rethey are paid from $3.50 to $5 per month and himself left out. The second journey for their services. For the first thirty proved conclusively that the great probmiles or so Mr. Roosevelt will have to lem was solved. Speke had found the watch out for desertions from his ranks. It is one of the rules that the porters met Samuel Baker and his wife, with a must be paid a month's wages in advance, and the wily Africans are not averse to deserting a day or two after their service achieved his triumph—Lake Albert was

For two years Livingstone had been dead him proved unavailing. Henry Morton DAILY
Stanley, sent out by James Gordon Po Stanley, sent out by James Gordon Bennett, of New York, finally reached Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika. Hearing the Engon Lake Tanganylka. Hearing the English language he knew that he had found the great explorer. No meeting of kings on a field of cloth of gold could exceed that one is simple majesty. Stanley took off his hat. "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" "Yes." answered Livingstone, with his wonderful wan smile. For some months the two men traveled together. Then the two men traveled together. Then Stanley returned to England. There was some feeling of jealousy because an American had succeeded where others failed but in the end the Geographical Society awarded him a medal, and Queen Victoria presented the usual snuff-box set with diamonds.

Since Stanley's time there have been many African explorers. Joseph Thomson, who discovered Lake Albert Edward, the last of the chain; the Duke of the Abruzzi, who scaled the Ruwenzori Mountains; A. Response to the appeals recently published by the Joint Finance Committee in behalf of the Associated Charities, Citizens' Relief Association, and the Tuberculesis Association has been encouraging, but by no means sufficient.

WILL YOU HELP?

There is still needed for the three charities $16,000. These charities teach the poor to save their money, prevent and redeem street beggars, compel shirking husbands to support their families, find employment for those out of work, clothe children for school, and sescue them from improper homes, obtain proper medical care for the indigent sick, and respond to every appeal for aid with careful attention, trying to do the best possible thing for each family.

Small contributions are cordially appreciated. A number of large gifts are also indispensable if the work is to proceed. Contributions sent to the Joint Finance Committee, 811 G street northwest, will be promptly acknowledged.

achieved his triumph—Lake Albert was the source of the Blue Nile.

In the popular mind, perhaps, the highest eachievement of David Livingston was the discovery of the Victoria Falls on the Zambesi River. Besides his own simple, straightforward journals, volumes have been written of those wonderful thirty years in Africa. On November 16, 1861, there occurred an immortal scene.
